

My Hero, Julia Boggs Dent Grant

My hero's best characteristics are that she was steady, daring and loving. I admire her because she was so patient.

The first thing I want to talk about is how Julia was steady. She was steady because she waited for four years before she wedded Ulysses S. Grant. As you can see she waited a long time for him. Second, she was daring because she was from the South and Ulysses was from the North. Her father and Mr. Grant argued a lot about politics. Last, but not least, Julia was a loving person because she fed and helped the soldiers, with the help of other ladies. Julia Grant said about living in the white house, "Quite the happiest period of my life." She really loved where she was in her life.

Now I will talk about her life. She was born in St. Louis, Missouri on January 26, 1826. She had three sons and one daughter. She died in 1902. Today Julia Grant would be 184 years old. Julia was buried at Riverside Drive right beside her husband, Ulysses Simpson Grant.

I hope you see now how Julia was so patient, courageous, and caring. She is someone great to study and learn about. I would like to be as patient as she was.
